

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system for handling liquid samples, comprising at least two superposed and interconnected planar elements between which a well for a liquid sample is formed which extends between an outwardly leading mouth to receive and/or deliver a liquid sample and an outwardly leading passage to connect the well to a displacement device for air or another gas.